

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

TIME TO TOAST AT GRAND CENTRAL MARKET
Eateries at DTLA's Historic Food Hall Add Beer and Wine Service To The Menu

LOS ANGELES (May 15, 2014) – Foodies will have an extra reason to celebrate as multiple eateries at the historic Grand Central Market in Downtown LA begin serving beer and wine. This is the latest exciting development in the revitalization of LA's oldest food hall, which in the last year has seen the opening of 12 new food and beverage stalls representing the best local chefs, purveyors and entrepreneurs.

The first vendor to offer brews and wine is Horse Thief BBQ, starting today, with Belcampo Meat Co. and Olio GCM Wood Fired Pizzeria expected to start pouring next. Each eatery has developed a beverage menu that complements the individual focus of its food. For example, Horse Thief BBQ has 10 taps and a beer list of Texas and craft brews plus a selection of wines chosen to pair well with the brisket and smoked meats for which it has quickly become famous. In the coming months, several other food stalls will expand their menus with beer and wine.

“Cheers to our vendors whose new beverage offerings further elevate the experience of eating and socializing at Grand Central Market,” said Adele Yellin, the Market's owner.

Celebrating the cuisines and cultures of Los Angeles since 1917, the historic Grand Central Market food arcade (between Broadway and Hill Street at the base of Angels Flight) is an unparalleled eating and shopping experience showcasing the best local chefs, culinary purveyors and entrepreneurs. For more information visit www.grandcentralmarket.com and connect with us @GrandCentralMkt or <https://www.facebook.com/GrandCentralMarket>.

#

CONTACT:

Carla Schalman, Roberta Silverman

breakwhitelight (for Grand Central Market)

(310) 827-3169, (818) 849-6347

carla@breakwhitelight.com, roberta@breakwhitelight.com